COMMENTARY AND OUTLOOK

The Canadian equity market was in somewhat of a "holding pattern" for most of 2017 until a late rally in the final four months pulled it out of the doldrums. Unfortunately the enthusiasm of late last year has wavered and the markets in general have now found themselves stuck into a similar holding pattern so far this year. In comparison, and although having posted decent returns in 2017, the Canadian market returns of 2017 contrasted with other members in its major world equity indices peer group most of which steadily continued to make much greater positive advances and added to their good returns of 2016. This may have caused global investors who trade in the short term to lose some interest in the Canadian markets but provides a compelling and timely opportunity for an investment in Canadian General Investments, Limited (CGI) as an attractive proxy for the Canadian market for both domestic and global investors with medium to longer-term time horizons.

Canadian markets appear held back while awaiting further developments on a number of issues before upwards momentum is likely able to resume. Many concerns remain outstanding, the most important of which currently relate to a number of President Trump's trade policy initiatives. Foremost is the ongoing renegotiation of NAFTA, a process that has been made more difficult with a stated objective by the US to "win" back and elevate protectionism of some of its industries. As Canada and the U.S. are each other's largest export markets with longstanding processes and integration, policy changes can be quite meaningful and influential on economic prospects for both sides of the border. And recently, the US has taken on a bigger and more formidable trade opponent in China. This could have far reaching implications on the global level particularly if trade frictions escalate and affect the overall economic activity. Resolution to many of these outstanding issues will likely take time to finalize and, in the interim, the uncertainty holds all markets hostage. In consideration of these factors, CGI's investment strategy has been to remain patient while awaiting clarification and, as a result, trading activity is being kept to a minimum. Despite this slow start to the year in the overall market, CGI has performed relatively well posting a 9.0% NAV return which is far ahead of the S&P/TSX benchmark total return of 3.1% at July 31, 2018.

Individuality came to the fore in 2017 and performance results, to a great degree, hinged on making good choices in selective stocks. There was a wide diversity of stock returns and this provided an opportunity for CGI to benefit from the Manager's bottom-up selection process and the portfolio's diversification mandate. The Manager was able to capture this opportunity last year and CGI's shareholders benefitted from a sizable uplift in value. We are currently experiencing a similar environment in 2018 but, once again, are showing some success on the individual selection level as we attempt to build on previous gains.

There seems to be an overly negative bias built into the outlook for the Canadian equity market in comparison to other globally developed markets. If current issues can be resolved in a reasonable fashion, their alleviation has the potential to greatly improve return potential going forward. Fortunately, even if the market remains hesitant, last year's and the year-to-date performance numbers have shown that CGI has the ability to outperform in spite of subdued conditions and should continue to succeed in its mandate to provide long-term superior returns to its shareholders.
